

HERO POLICEMAN TO BE A LAWYER

Adolph C. Carsten, Once Diamond Cutter, Worked His Way Through College and Graduated from University.

JOINED THE FORCE TO STUDY LAWBREAKERS.

Worked Ten Years to Save Money Enough to Give Mother a Living Income—Rescued Many Boys from Drowning.

With the assistance of a scholarship, the son of Miss Helen Gould, won by him in a competitive examination, Adolph Christian Carsten, Bachelor of Law and Life-saving policeman, has just completed an education obtained under trying circumstances, he says, if a chance of courses were left to him again.

Carsten is a Hoboken policeman who is stationed at the public bath, and already he has a record of ten lives saved. He does not intend to continue in the ranks of the bluecoats long, however, as his graduation from the New York University put him out in the world to earn a living as a lawyer. He will practice in his home town, Hoboken.

Carsten worked for ten years as a diamond cutter and saved enough money to give his mother an income sufficient to keep her, with the little excess he made from working while going through college, and he has never touched that amount set aside for his mother.

While cutting diamonds he cut the edges off himself a good deal by reading, and six years ago he went to Centenary College, where he was studying, and along with regular teaching, he was teaching the others that he was 10 per cent ahead.

Taught German and Music. At once he went to the New York University and took up the study of law. There always was present the necessity of earning enough to get along on while he was studying, and it was hard work. He taught the freshmen class of the college German in his own freshman year and opened a music class.

It was late every night when he went to bed and early every morning when he got up, but that little income he had established for his mother remained intact, and regularly there was enough added to it to keep the other person in the world near to him in a happy state of mind.

Though the trip to and from the university morning and night was a long one, there always was the satisfaction of living at home, and it gave a fine opportunity to study on car and jump-box, and soon he became a figure in the streets of the city.

After a good grasp on the law was obtained by Carsten, there developed in him a strong liking for politics and, while it was difficult to find the time, he entered the debates of the students and made good impressions.

In order to reach the practical side of the game of politics the erstwhile student of theology and the youthful diamond cutter went into the local fights of the Fourth Ward of Hoboken and on the stump he made a strong and impressive speaker. At all the Democratic mass meetings he was in demand as a speaker and already has built up a following which promises honors in future elections.

Why He Became a Policeman. So good a speaker and so promising a student of the law was sought for to give advice to the young and adventurous of his ward, and soon the liking for the criminal side of the practice of law grew until he determined to take it up. This it was that led him to seek and obtain an appointment as a policeman. He felt that it might get nearer the true state of affairs from the prosecuting side of a case.

"There is no better way in which to learn how the members of the underworld live and their methods, I think it was the best step I ever made. One thing it showed me above all others is that the police and the underworld are not so far apart as it might seem. The police are the working class of people who are working to win, in a majority of cases, a fair share to a hard-earned living. The underworld is the class of people who are working to win, in a majority of cases, a fair share to a hard-earned living."

It was because Carsten is an expert swimmer that he was assigned to the bath, and it was to his complete mastery of the nautical art that many a youngster owes his life.

Carsten is a heavy, tall and strong-looking man, and is of the stuff of which hustlers are made. He is twenty-nine years old and has won the reputation of being the finest looking man in uniform in Hoboken.
